

The End of Dyslexia in Higher Education?

Wednesday 7th May 2014, 9.30am to 4pm
Calman Learning Centre, Lower Mountjoy, Durham University

Current practices for supporting university students considered to have dyslexia are wholly flawed and urgently require radical reform. As Julian Elliott and Elena Grigorenko demonstrate in their new book, The Dyslexia Debate, the many and varied understandings of dyslexia often fail to reflect scientific advances in the field, and are no longer justifiable.

It is intended that this event will act as a stimulus to effect radical reform of provision in this area.

For further information go to www.durham.ac.uk/conference.booking/details/?id=297 or call 0191 334 2884

The Dyslexia Debate

JULIAN G. ELLIOTT
ELENA L. GRIGORENKO